If you answered yes to any of these questions then this book is for you...

How does one even get out of bed after a traumatic event like the death of a close family member?

How does one get over a lengthy, promising relationship?

How does one react to news of a serious illness like stage 3 or 4 cancer?

Fifty Things to Know about Grit: How to Keep Going When You Want to Quit, by KT Love, offers an approach to ...

Most books on “grit” tell you to seek out help from friends, support groups and a counselor.

Although there's nothing wrong with that there are alternative ways to help you get through a seemingly hopeless situation.

Based on knowledge from the world's leading experts can be misinterpreted mainly because they don't always have all the right answers for a unique situation and these experts do not know the true heart of the individual. Everyone handles things differently, there are no steadfast rules to follow.

In these pages you'll discover different ways to deal with tragedy in your own way. I will present various methods for the numerous situations that affect people.

This book will help you to deal in trying times and offer different ways of coping outside of seeking professional help.

By the time you finish this book, you will know various ways of dealing with unforeseen tragedies. Everyone is different so you will hopefully be able to find your way or at least get back on track with your life through someone who has been there and back.
