Victims of serious abuse-whether it be childhood abuse, rape, or domestic violence as an adult-often feel alone in their struggles. Often, they can't see past the pain. They try to run away from it, hiding long-standing wounds deep in their subconscious minds. Abuse survivors are often too tied up in their own suffering and pain to see a light at the end of the tunnel. Peace seems impossible, and escape seems unrealistic.

So what does abuse have to do with boats? More than you might think. Four stories in the Bible are about boats and occurrences on their decks. These stories teach valuable lessons that can aid in the healing process, no matter the horrendous level of past abuse. For instance, Jonah tried to run from his responsibility-his pain. God sent a storm that wrecked his boat; Jonah eventually realized that he could have found his peace, if only he had turned to God in the first place.

Utilizing the stories of Noah's Ark, Jonah and the whale, Jesus calming stormy water, and Paul's shipwreck, abuse survivor Sue Denney illuminates the lessons learned in each Bible tale. By focusing on biblical characters, abuse survivors can find trust in the Lord, which eventually leads to healing, freedom, and peace. It's never too late to overcome pain; it's never too late to cast your eyes upon Jesus.
