Interview with the Author

Q: What made you want to write a middle grade adventure based on an ark in space?

A: First of all, why not? It just seemed like a bunch of fun. But seriously, when my son was in his preteens he was an avid reader, and I noticed a complete lack of science fiction for middle school kids, so I wanted to write a fun, preteen science fiction series that I knew he would love.

Q: But why a kids science fiction book? It seems like children and teens are more into fantasy.

A: Don't get me wrong, I love fantasy, but there's just something about science fiction that gets my heart pounding. The Noah Zarc series is part children's science fiction dystopian, part action adventure, and just a whole lot of fun. At the same time, it asks the deeper questions about the power of family, and even what it means to be human.

Q: So it's a middle grade dystopian? Can't that be a little dark for kids?

A: There is definitely a trend in teen science fiction and fantasy to go a little darker, but that wasn't my goal here. Noah Zarc could be considered religious Christian science fiction. What this mostly means is it is clean, fun. The dystopian side asks some serious questions. Some are related to what happens when a government gets too powerful and does whatever it wants.
