The Political Economy of China-Latin American Relations in the New Millennium

In this book, Carol Wise and Margaret Myers, widely recognized as experts on China-Latin America relations, examine the political and economic forces that have shaped Chinese engagement in the region and how these have affected specific economic sectors and policy-making decisions across the Pacific in new and surprising ways. Divided into three parts, the contributors begin by examining the various private, state-level, sub-national, extra-regional and other actors that have shaped China-Latin America engagement in recent years. Part Two surveys China-Latin America Trade Patterns in the 2000s paying particular attention paid to China's relatively new free trade agreements (FTAs) with Chile, Costa Rica, and Peru, the increasing homogeneity of South American exports to China, and the outlook for China-Central America economic relations, which have rarely been addressed in the existing literature on China and Latin America. The concluding part explores the politics of Chinese aid, loans, and investment in Latin America which occasionally yield disproportionate influence on economic policy in individual Latin American nations.

This volume is a welcomed addition to the growing field of interest on China-Latin America relations; a complex interplay between economics and politics that has shaped China's relations with the region as a second decade of deepening engagement draws to a close. An indispensable read to students, scholars and policy makers wishing to gain new insights into the political economy of China-Latin America relations across both countries and sectors.
