99 Ways to Become a Better Person Mohammad Mahjoub

Throughout his childhood in Saudi Arabia, Mohammad Mahjoub always found motivation in the power of words. And now that he has achieved his dream of coming to the United States to study and learn English, he is even more inspired.

His passion for language, positivity, and the pursuit of becoming the best possible person he can be has driven him to collect these ninety-nine adages on self-improvement.

No matter what the goal is for the day, for the week, or for life, each of these aphorisms applies to a broad spectrum of circumstances, inspiring action toward tapping into the power residing within each and every one of us.

We are all products of our personal dreams and efforts, our mistakes and successes. Mahjoub reminds us that we are a process, and his book's fourth passage, "Building requires a lot of hard work and a lot of sweat; however, destroying requires sleeping all day doing nothing," hammers home the fact of life that nothing is easy. The worst damage we can do to ourselves is to do nothing.

So pick up this guide, begin each day with one of these building blocks, and construct a better you!
