Henry Sera just defaulted on a loan, now the guys he owes money are threatening to take the difference out of his hide. Using a cheese grater. Valuing his good looks and un-grated face, he skips town to stay with a friend in New York.

Everything is looking up for a bit—he lands a bartending job and he's offered a lease that's too good to be true. Henry's not the type to read things though, and the lease contains something called an "immortal soul clause", not to mention that the landlord is a demon.

All Henry wants is to find a nice place to stay where nobody will shred his face with kitchen implements. And maybe a date with the hot one-legged girl that does porn. He just has to decide if it's worth selling his soul, or worse—moving to Brooklyn.

Into The Fire is part one of the four part series Purgatory, NY.
